Time is running out; we can't afford ineffective approaches to the climate crisis. This workshop will provide a brief overview of where we are in the climate movement and look at key targets for slowing or reversing climate change. We will explore the most successful climate strategies and tactics for building our movement, shifting government policies and corporate practices, while changing the public discourse on climate.

Daniel Solnit is a union organizer, campaign strategist, and social change activist with 40 years of experience. These strategies can be applied to a number of issues.
