RISE UP!

A look at Today's Labor Movement

with

NORTH BAY JOBS WITH JUSTICE

Free with donations welcome

Mon, September 24 7-9 pm

North Bay Jobs with Justice will discuss topics including: why unions matter and the consequences of union decline, what is the new labor movement, what is social movement unionism and how does that differ from business unionism? We will explore why unions must build community-labor coalitions to organize low income, immigrants, youth, and women workers and the role of Jobs with Justice in building community-labor coalitions. We will also learn about successful organizing campaigns, specifically UNITE HERE at the Hyatt Vineyard Creek Hotel. And we will include ways that the public can become involved with Jobs with Justice campaigns and the labor movement.

"Workers alone are vulnerable and easy to break for nothing is weaker than the power of one, yet united they are unbreakable," says Rebel Fagin, Occupy Sonoma County activist and long-time community organizer.
