

We will, at some point, find our self encountering the other—the person, group, style or perspective that we perceive as not us and to some degree oppose or marginalize. Understanding and appreciating who we are and who the other may be is vital for efficacy, deeper conflict resolution and overall health (and less burn-out!). This public presentation will combine brief lecture, discussion and experiential exercises.

Mon, Jan 22 at 7PM

Donations Requested

Peace & Justice Center of Sonoma Co. 467 Sebastopol Ave, Santa Rosa 95401 • www.ocsoco.org • 707-877-6650 Bill Say, M.A. is a Process Work Diplomate and a faculty member of California Institute of Integral Studies. For more info: www.billsay.com

We will, at some point, find our self encountering the other—the person, group, style or perspective that we perceive as not us and to some degree oppose or marginalize. Understanding and appreciating who we are and who the other may be is vital for efficacy, deeper conflict resolution and overall health (and less burn-out!). This public presentation will combine brief lecture, discussion and experiential exercises.

Mon, Jan 22 at 7PM

Donations Requested

Peace & Justice Center of Sonoma Co.

467 Sebastopol Ave, Santa Rosa 95401 • www.ocsoco.org • 707-877-6650

Bill Say, M.A. is a Process Work Diplomate and a faculty member of California Institute of Integral Studies. For more info: www.billsay.com